CAPITAL GOSSIP AND PROVINCIAL NEWS

Opening of Agricultural Schools

Classes in the agricultural schools of the province will open for the 1922-23 term on October 31. The classes will be conducted this year at four schools, these being at Raymond, Claresholm, Olds and Vermilion. Arrangements have been made by the department of agriculture so that prospective students from the Gleichen and Youngstown districts will be transported free of charge to the schools at Claresholm or at Olds.

A particularly good attendance is looked for at the four schools this year. The courses in agriculture and home economics provided for the older boys and girls of the farm at these schools have become far-famed and it is expected that more students will be able to take advantage of them this year. As is known, the courses are free, the only cost to the student being that of room and board. Dormitory accommodation is provided for girls at Olds and Claresholm, but room and board can be had reasonably at all four towns in respectable homes. At three of these schools, Olds, Claresholm and Raymond, special courses in irrigation will be given. The instructor is E. E. Eisenhauer. The staffs of the schools for the coming term are now about completed, and will be announced shortly.

New Marketing Scheme

The department of agriculture is now proceeding with the arrangements in connection with the new scheme for the marketing of seed grain announced last week. Prominent seed grain growers have written to the department expressing their approval of the new plan, and intimating that they will be ready to patronize it. The clearing plan to be operated by the government will be installed shortly.

New Course of Studies

The new course of study for the public schools of the province has now been printed, and has been distributed by the education department to all schools in the province. In cities where a superintendent is engaged, the course of study has been sent to his office. In all other cases, the books have been sent to the secretaries of the school districts. This plan of distribution has been adopted because there is as yet no complete list of teachers in their present locations available to the department. Teachers who have not yet received the course of studies should get into touch with their school boards at once. The new course is authorized for use in all the schools of the province during the present year, and each teacher should secure a copy at once. The course is the most detailed and complete of any province in Canada. It has been published in a most attractive form, and the course itself is most attractive. In the preparation of the course, while considerable detail has been included, a nice balance has been retained between a necessary outline, and took great attention to method. The course is somewhat longer than the one it replaces, but it should prove very much more suggestive and helpful to the teacher. A close study of the course, and close adherence to its suggestions, should result in more effective work, particularly in such subjects as English, nature study and industrial arts.

Cantaloupes by Irrigation

Interest in the accomplishments possible under irrigation has been stimulated during the past week by the announcement that the Canada Land and Irrigation Co. whose project lies west of Medicine Hat, has been able to produce satisfactorily a quantity of cantaloupes. From a plot of two acres, the company expects this year to have from 100 to 150 cases of the fruit to ship.

Lethbridge Northern Progress

Progress on the construction of the Lethbridge Northern Irrigation Project has been rapid this year and 95 per cent. of the project is now completed. Water should be through the ditches this fall, making possible the use of the water for crops next year. The offices of the irrigation council at Lethbridge have issued a handsome booklet on the attractions of the Lethbridge Northern district.

A yield of 42,000 bushels of wheat from 1700 acres is expected from the farms of the Ohio Farming Co. south of Lethbridge this fall.

The twelve-mile extension of the Lacombe and Blindman Valley railway west of Lacombe will be completed in time to handle the crop this fall, it is stated.

Complete figures of the registration at the three normal schools of the province show that over 900 teachers are to be in training at these schools this fall. Approximately 1000 new teachers will be available for the schools at the end of this year's normal school term.

Classes at the University of Alberta will open September 27. Registration starts September 25. There will be one or two changes in the staff. Oscar Bridgman, from Harvard will be lecturer in physical chemistry. Dr. Collip, who has been absent doing research work in Toronto, will return as professor in bio-chemistry. Prof. Newton, who has been engaged in research work in Minnesota will return to the faculty of agriculture as professor in field husbandry. The position vacated by Prof. Dowell, professor of animal husbandry, has not yet been filled. Prof. W. M. Fyfe has also resigned to go to the Institute of Technology of Massachusetts.

Macleod Honors Her Heroic Dead

On Monday, September 4th, Macleod and District's War Memorial Monument was fittingly unveiled, and stands today an everlasting granite tribute by the people of this town and district to its heroes who made the supreme sacrifice in the Great War.

They did not count the cost—Those lion-hearted men—Who faced the grim grey host And fought, and fought again; They gave their very all (What more had they to give?) Who answered Freedom's call And died that we might live.

They loved this sun-kissed land That rolls from sea to sea—That gallant hero band Who fell to keep her free; Her hills and vales and streams Were utmost dear to them—That valiant band—a jewel that gleams For Britain's diadem.

A great concourse of the people of Macleod and district gathered for the unveiling, among which were the children of Macleod public and separate school. The spirit of the occasion could be felt—an atmosphere of dignified sorrow for the dead commingled with solemn pride in the memory of their prowess in the time of King and Country's need—and throughout the programme the sentiment of the speakers and audience seemed to be that words were inadequate to express a fitting tribute to this locality's heroic dead—that our war martyrs could be best fittingly eulogized by tears and flowers and memory inspired action in carrying forward the ideals they died for the attainment of—and memory carried all back to the dark days when hope and faith lingered in the face of disaster—when mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers dreaded the possible disclosures of

ADVERTISERS PLEASE NOTE:

Changes of copy for local advertisements must be in The Times office not later than 4 p.m. on Tuesday of the week in which such are to appear—this is essential in the publishing of the paper on time and as all advertising copy is called for by a representative of this office it should not be a hardship for advertisers to co-operate with The Times in its effort to publish early on Thursday each week.

THE ADDRESSES

Brig.-Gen. Stewart, D.S.O.

Brig.-General Stewart said, "Boys and girls of Macleod, it is a great honor for me to be here to take part in unveiling this monument to the boys of Macleod who gave their lives for you and for me. They went out, and did not come back. Some of you knew them. This monument will live to ever tell us that these boys did their duty for home and flag, their duty that you and I might have the freedom that today we enjoy, that the British flag might protect its people. We are here to honor their memory. Just after the armistice we were collected at points in France in thousands. We came home, but they remained; we did what we could at the call of country. These names on this monument, these boys whose names are here, did more than we, they gave their lives and that is the great sacrifice; they gave all they had. Boys and girls, follow their example by self-sacrifice in your lives if you would be noble and great. We pass this way only once; let us then make our lives worth while and carry on for Motherland and for Canada, the gem of the British Empire."

Mayor Fawcett's Address

On Mayor Fawcett being presented with the title deeds and the keeping of the monument for the town of Macleod, he said:

"Fellow-countrymen: I use this all-embracing term as being the most satisfactory by which to refer to you all, fellow-countrymen to build yet better and higher on behalf of the common good. With honor do I receive these title papers on behalf of the town of Macleod, and in the same spirit of appreciation that has prompted the action to raise the necessary funds. May the present mayor and councilmen, and those to follow in the years to come never forget the sacrifice rendered, in honor and memory of which this memorial has today been unveiled. (Here the mayor faced the monument.) Granite, gray granite, ages before man thou wert. Ages countless ages after those here today have gone hence, thou wilt be. Yet with all thine eternity of existence, thou art not more permanent than those principles of service for the common good, sacrifice for the highest which we are today commemorating. Surely this rock from the everlasting hills is a fitting memorial to bear on its face for all time the names of those whose sacrifice was their all, and to continually remind us, and those after us, of the service of the others—an almost countless host, and may its effect on human action be as lasting as this granite. And as this monument stands facing the glorious sunsets of this western country, announcing to all who may pass, the purpose for which it stands, may we each at the sunset of our lives have spoken for service in the common good with equal stability."

Father Rouleau

"While a stranger to most of you here, yet I am not a stranger to what has taken place in Macleod. Macleod has today unveiled to the world a monument that will tell for all time to come what self-sacrifice really is. When we read these names, we remember what peace cost and we honor these names, and go home with the determination that our lives be useful to others must be a sacrifice in many ways."

The Monument

The monument which is of Nelson Island granite, is a plan shaft eleven feet high, with a base of five feet nine inches by four feet three inches and weighs about eleven tons. It stands on a concrete emplacement on the west side of the Court House Square, and is flanked on either side by captured German guns.

Following are the names inscribed upon the memorial shaft: Alcock, J.; Adderly, E. J.; Barnes, R. B.; Beach, O. M.; Blackstead, J.; Brown, T. M.; Brownlee, H.; Campbell, D. ### IN FLANDERS FIELDS

In Flanders fields, the poppies grow Between the crosses, row on row, That mark our place; and in the sky The larks, still bravely singing, fly, Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the dead. Short days ago We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow, Loved and were loved; and now we lie In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe! To you, from falling hands, we throw The torch. Be yours to lift it high! If ye break faith with us who die We shall not sleep, though poppies blow In Flanders fields. (Below—Lieut.-Col. John McCrae.)

MACLEOD METHODIST CHURCH

TELEGRAPH NEWS TOLD IN BRIEF

FORD WORTH $409,820,000:—Lansing, Mich., Sept. 2.—Total assets of the Ford Motor company are $409,820,132.22 according to the annual financial statement filed today in the office of the secretary of state in connection with the corporation tax returns of the concerns that paid the maximum fee of $10,000. The statement is of June 30, 1922, and the company's surplus is shown as $289,935,296.40.

BIG COLONIZATION PLAN:—Ottawa, Sept. 1.—A scheme for the settlement of ten million acres of land within ten years in different parts of the Dominion is before the government today.

Originally, it was the Western Canada colonization association which was behind the proposal but it was said the scope was enlarged to include the whole country rather than the west alone, but the promoters are the same, headed by Sir John Willison of Toronto. It is stated that $1,500,000 has been subscribed for the purpose of promoting immigration.

GREEK ARMY ROUTED:—London Sept. 5.—General opinion in well-informed quarters in London today was that the disaster to the Greek Army in Asia Minor was complete. There seemed little prospect that anything now could save it from a total debacle.

The Greek government has appealed to the powers to obtain an armistice with the Turkish Nationalists who have virtually driven the Greeks from the battlefield and as a result of an interchange among the chancelleries of London, Paris and Rome, instructions have been sent to the allied high commissioners of the three powers in Constantinople to discuss joint measures for bringing about a suspension of hostilities.

It is hoped here that a meeting between representatives of the belligerents can be arranged, to be held within the next two or three days, in a neutral zone of Asia Minor, southwest of Ismid and that this meeting will be productive of a speedy cessation of fighting.

THOUSANDS FLEE:—Athens, Sept. 2.—General army headquarters has ordered concentration of the entire southern Greek army on the Uchak line in Asia Minor to make a definite stand against the advance of the Turkish nationalists.

The number of wounded in the recent fighting is estimated at 1,500. The fatalities, it is declared, have been relatively few. A Smyrna dispatch says that at nine o'clock last night the Greek retreat toward Uchak was continuing and that thousands of women and children were fleeing ahead of the army to escape the Turks.

42 MINERS ENTOMBED:—Newcastle, England, Sept. 5.—Forty-two were entombed through an explosion in a coal pit at Whitehaven this morning, the Evening Chronicle states. The bodies of ten workers are reported to have been recovered.

THREE HUNDRED PERISH:—Tokyo, Aug. 30.—The Japanese cruiser Nitaka went down in a typhoon off the Kamchatka coast, August 26, with virtually all hands, according to confirmed advices received by the admiralty. The naval report said that practically nine of her crew of three hundred were saved. The destroyer Maki has been ordered to the scene of the disaster.

CONTROL OF R.C.M.P. MAY COME WEST:—Ottawa, Aug. 31.—Premier King's intimations in Toronto last night of coming changes in the jurisdiction of the Mounted Police, is understood here to foreshadow the transfer back to the west of the headquarters of that body. They were moved here from Regina in the days of the Union government and amalgamated with the Dominion police force. The present party, when in opposition, objected to this policy strongly and since taking office the force has been reduced considerably. It is understood that the old order will be reverted to with headquarters apart from the financial control in the west, and operations limited to the enforcement of federal laws and the patrol of the unorganized territories. If this is done, Regina will likely be again the operating centre as the quarters are already there.

THE EMPRESS THEATRE CURRENT ATTRACTIONS

SMASHING SCENES IN NEW THE HART FILM "THE WHISTLE"

Famous Paramount Star a Factory Foreman in Latest Offering

A drawbridge tender asleep at his post; an open bridge and a motor crashing into the inky waters below; a child's scream and a man's brave plunge to the rescue!

This is one of the smashing scenes in "The Whistle"—a picture produced by William S. Hart and written by Lambert Hillyer who also directed it. The original story is by May Wilmet and Olin Lyman.

In this new Paramount offering, which will be shown at the Empress theatre next Friday and Saturday, Mr. Hart has a new role—that of a factory worker, a man accustomed to "jump to the sound of the whistle."

His attempt to mete out justice to a man whose selfishness has resulted in the death of the worker's beloved child, develops a series of situations that come as completely satisfying train of events which round out to a conclusion that is distinctly compelling.

In every way this is a powerful drama and one that should satisfy the most exacting. Three famous juvenile players appear in the cast. Frank Brownlee has the "heavy" role.

WHITECHAPEL IS SHOWN IN "THREE LIVE GHOSTS"

The Art Department of Paramount's London Studio tried out a novel idea for one of the sets in "Three Live Ghosts," which will be shown at the Empress Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday.

For the Gubbin's home, a typical Whitechapel background was requisitioned. A house-to-house search in one of the lowest districts of the city was made and at last an old woman was induced to part with her household goods for a few days in return for the usual "consideration."

Thus when the new George Fitzmaurice picture is shown here the public will get a chance of seeing in what kind of surroundings "the other half" of London really live, for not only is every stick of furniture part and parcel of a genuine Whitechapel parlor, but the arrangement of every bit is faithfully copied from the original residence from which it was taken. Anna Q. Nilsson and Norman Kerry have the leading roles.

REAL APACHE HAUNTS IN "THE GREEN TEMPTATION"

The haunts of the Parisian Apaches are reproduced in Betty Compson's latest Paramount picture, "The Green Temptation," showing next Monday and Tuesday at the Empress Theatre.

This is somewhat of a triumph in motion picture architecture, as these dens have never before been exactly duplicated, for tourists are seldom admitted to these underground resorts in the old Roman catacombs of this mysterious group of Parisian secret societies.

The replicas were made possible, however, by the co-operation of Prof. Sigurd Russell, for twenty years a resident of Paris and now a French instructor, and Theodore Kosloff, screen player, who plays the villain role of the chief Apache in the new picture.

The "Cafe des Apaches" setting was constructed from sketches submitted by Professor Russell. When in Paris, Mr. Kosloff was invited by Madame Effrosi to give an Apache dance at a big function. To provide an exact interpretation of the dance, Mr. Kosloff visited the Apache haunts with a member of the order. There he observed the habits and customs of the Apaches, which he has helped bring to the screen in "The Green Temptation."

This picture, said to be a masterpiece production was adapted by Monte M. Katterjohn and Julia Crawford Ivers, from the magazine story, "The Noose," by Constance Lindsay Skinner. Others in the cast besides those mentioned, are Mahlon Hamilton, Neely Edwards, Edward Burns, Lynmore Lynnard and Mary Thurman.

A gratified world will be glad to hear, on the authority of his boot maker, that the foot of President Harding is just about perfect. It would be a good deal more so if it had some kick in it.

QUEER SCENE IS PICTURED IN "THREE LIVE GHOSTS"

A wave of excitement recently agitated the busiest thoroughfare of London when a burley policeman held up the traffic to allow the passage of an aristocratic-looking gentleman, immaculately tailored wearing the latest thing in expensive baby-carriages, to which was attached a sheep which showed an obvious disinclination to cross the road.

Absorbed and quite unperturbed by the amazement caused by his unheralded arrival, the gentleman steered his charge to the opposite side walk, and by the time the crowd had recovered from its astonishment, had apparently vanished into thin air.

At the same moment two cameras which had been taking a record of this unusual scene from the inside of a covered motor lorry ceased to grind, and George Fitzmaurice, famous Paramount producer congratulated himself on having successfully secured a particularly effective and difficult "shot."

The episode showed Cyril Chadwick in his impersonation of "Spooky" in "Three Live Ghosts," a Paramount picture which will be shown at the Empress Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday. Anna Q. Nilsson and Norman Kerry are the featured players.

LET HART FANS REJOICE!

Popular Paramount Star to be Seen Here in "The Whistle"

The big army of William S. Hart fans have cause to rejoice. Their favorite is coming, in another virile vehicle in which his fictive ability is displayed to the utmost. The new Paramount starring vehicle is "The Whistle," a rattling story of life in a manufacturing town in New England. It will be shown at the Empress Theatre next Friday and Saturday. Mr. Hart has the role of a mill foreman who fights for the rights of the mill, and for protection against accidents, and when his own son is killed in an unguarded scaffolding, he plans vengeance against his negligent employer. He saves the child of the mill owner from drowning and disappears with the infant whom he rears as his own son in order to "make him jump at the sound of the whistle." But when a good woman, the mother of the boy, enters his life, his scheme is abandoned. Myrtle Steadman is leading woman.

BETTY COMPSON FINE IN "THE GREEN TEMPTATION"

Betty Compson's beauty is displayed in a greater variety of costumes in her most recent Paramount picture, "The Green Temptation," showing next Monday at the Empress Theatre than in any picture she has ever done.

As "Genelle," the Apache, she is vivacious and daring.

Her "Columbine" in the pantomime dance with Theodore Kosloff, is piquant and dainty.

As the Amazon Warrior, in another striking dance, she is bold and fierce. In the costume of a Red Cross nurse she is quiet and sympathetic.

EMPRESS MONDAY & TUESDAY

As Paris' most noted actress, she is haughty and proud.

At a mask ball given by one of Long Island's social leaders, she is the statuesque Grecian maiden.

The dancing costumes are gorgeous and display Miss Compson's beauty and talent as a dancer to a marked degree.

"The Green Temptation" was adapted from the story, "The Noose," by Constance Lindsay Skinner. Theodore Kosloff, Mahlon Hamilton, Mary Thurman and others are in the cast.

DON'T MISS "THREE LIVE GHOSTS"

Judging from reports received by Manager Cutler, "Three Live Ghosts," a new Paramount picture, which comes to the Empress theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, is a big success. The scenes are laid in England and many historic spots of London are pictured. Don't miss it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON FORESTRY

(By Canadian Forestry Association.)
Q.—I am informed that the fall is a good time to transplant evergreen trees from the woods. Is this true, and what time would you recommend?

A.—Evergreens can be quite successfully transplanted in August. The tree has completed its growth for the season then and yet there is sufficient root action going on to take hold in its new site, before winter. Select trees two or three feet high growing out in the open and lift them with a good ball of soil taking care not to let it break off. Plant firmly about two inches deeper than the tree was before, and water well after it is planted.

Q.—I have four trees with four or five stems each which I wish to develop into trees of one stem. Will it be alright to cut them all off to one stem this fall?

A.—No. If you do, you will likely weaken the base of the remaining stems and they may break off in the storms of winter. Better select your permanent stem and cut the others off at about half way down this fall if they are likely to be broken by snow or wind over winter. Then in spring take two of them off and no more. Next year take two more until you have the single tree effect you desire. If you cut off all the undesirable stems at once your trees will send out a lot of suckers to take their place and you will just be as bad as before.

Q.—Our cottonwoods shed a lot of cotton this year which seems to have collected among the needles of our Spruce trees, making them look dirty and dull. What can be done to get rid of it?

A.—Your trouble is not due to the cotton from your cottonwood trees as a close examination will show. It is caused by red spider or mites, species of Tetranychus. The creatures are very small and you will require a magnifying glass to see them. They are present in thousands on spruce this year and all over the country and as they are continually wandering about among the needles, spinning a web as they go, the branches soon get covered with the wooliness you mention. Dust sticks to the web, air is shut out from the needles and the plant slowly dies of suffocation. Besides this, of course, the spiders are living on the sap of the tree. Your trees are in a dangerous condition and should be at once sprayed with a strong

WHY BABIES CRY

It's often hard to find the trouble—It may be teeth—it may be stomach—but oh! so often it is just a chafed irritated skin on which poor Soap has been used.

The remedy for this is so simple! Hours of suffering—night after night of disturbance—have been avoided by mothers, who have insisted on—Baby's Own Soap. Of course it costs a little more, a very little more, however—than what is often bought and used—but four generations of Canadian Mothers are there to vouch for its purity, for the soothing healing effect on Baby's delicate skin, for the lovely pure flower fragrance it leaves when Baby fresh and clean is taken from his bath.

Don't you think, Madam, it's worth paying the 10c. cake, a little less if you buy a box (3 cakes) which your dealer asks for Baby's Own Soap. Adv.

force of water to break up the webs. Look out for them next year again about the middle of June and wash them off every two weeks during summer with the water spray. Many spruces have died on the prairies from red spider the past few dry years.

Q.—The cottonwood trees in my plantation grew splendidly till they were about twenty feet high, but now most of them are dying at the tops. What can I do about it?

A.—Your experience is a common one on the prairies. It would seem that the cottonwood requires more moisture than it has been able to secure the last few years and unless under irrigation, or unless you are prepared to give them special care, they should not be planted under dry farm conditions.

Q.—We have two kinds of evergreens growing in our lot which we are told are spruce and pine. The leaves are different. How can we tell which is which?

A.—You can tell them very easily. Pines have their needles in bunches of two, three, five or seven and if you squeeze them close together to fit into one another you will find the uniting bundle will always be round. Spruce needles are single, sharp pointed and square; or at least four sided in section.

Q.—Can you give me a list of Perennial flowers suitable for planting this fall?

A.—Tall growing varieties: Golden glow, tall Larkspur, Tiger Lily, double or single. Medium Paeonies, German Iris, Chinese Larkspur, Gaillardia, Perennial Flax, Phlox, Oriental Poppy, Low Growing: Pyrethrum, Roseum, Clove Ping. Plant in moist soil about the end of September and mulch over winter.

AMUNDSEN'S TRY FOR THE NORTH POLE

The expedition to the North Pole, in which Captain Roald Amundsen, the discoverer of the South Pole, has sailed, is unique, inasmuch as it establishes the precedent for the use of airplanes for Arctic travel. Captain Amundsen plans to fly across the Pole from Point Barrow in Alaska, to Spitzbergen. The distance is 2,000 miles, and the all metal plane in which the explorer plans to make his flight is equipped with tanks to carry a supply of fuel which will last for thirty hours.

Not only is this the first time that airplanes have been used to further a pole hunting expedition, but it represents, too, a change of heart for the famous Norwegian explorer. Several years ago, when the airplane was in its infancy, Amundsen was asked if the rumors were true that he intended to attempt to conquer the Arctic by plane. His reply was: "Of course not; that would be ridiculous." Then came the war and the tremendous development of air navigation which resulted from it, and now the airplane is the chief reliance of Amundsen in his latest effort to explore the ice-bound territory of the farthest north.

The machine which the explorer will use in this pioneer flight across the pole is an all-metal monoplane specially made for him by John M. Larsen. Amundsen will take with him two pilots, Lieutenant Dahl, an expert Norwegian flier and Elmer Fullerton, a Canadian. A second machine will be held on reserve, to take the place of the first choice plane, called "Ellisabeth," in case of accident on the trip north.

The new Amundsen expedition will be the most completely equipped in history. The most elaborate scientific instruments will permit the explorer to make exact records of polar conditions, which he expects will reveal to science many secrets of the polar ice fields which will have tremendous value to future generations. Samples of every species of botanical, biological and geological development which can be found will be brought back, and the most accurate and far-reaching meteorological and astronomical observations will be continuously made. Amundsen's great ambition on this expedition is to discover data relating to conditions in the polar regions which will enable science to solve the mysteries of storms and tides.

While this expedition is the first to attempt to reach the pole by plane it marks the second occasion on which air travel has been attempted as a means of reaching the earth's northern apex. Professor Andree, a Swedish explorer of great attainments, back in 1897, developed a theory that the pole could be reached by Balloon. He left Spitzbergen on June 11 of that year in a specially constructed craft. A record which he threw out at the end of his first eight hours flight showed his position at that time to be 82 north and 25 east; no other trace of his attempt ever was found, nor was Andree again heard of. He perished in the vast ice fields of the polar regions.

Macleod School Fair Was a Great Success

The Macleod School Fair, held on Wednesday, September 6th, was a great success from every stand point—in fact the Claresholm judges stated that it was the best in the history of school fairs conducted under the supervision of Claresholm School of Agriculture. The attendance was good.

Entries from every department were well filled and of excellent quality. The vegetables and collections of vegetables were wonderful and exceeded all expectations. Domestic products made up in quality any lack in quantity and speak loudly for the efficiency of the parents' tuition of the children. The showing of garden and wild flowers made a beautiful display. In the school work it was apparent that the teachers had spared no pains with their pupils in connection with all departments of school work. Live stock exhibits were good, especially in the pony class, and in the poultry exhibit. The Hutterite Brethren children's exhibit (not for competition) deserves special mention. The sports program was a good one and was carried out without a hitch—affording much pleasure to those in attendance.

The list of awards is not available for this week but will appear in full in the issue of The Times of September 14th.

The executive of Macleod Agricultural Society wish to go on record as being highly appreciative of the service rendered by the teaching staffs of the different schools and many individual ladies and gentlemen who so willingly and ably assisted in making the fair such a grand success.

The children are to be congratulated on the enthusiasm displayed in preparing exhibits and the whole-hearted manner in which they participated in the sports.

HOUSE FLIES KILL CHILDREN

Three Become Suddenly Ill—Two Die in Agony—Doctors Baffled

BODIES WASTED AWAY

From the Toronto Globe, Nov. 17th, 1921:

Milton, Nov. 16.—As the result of a strange disease, the origin of which is baffling the doctors in this part of Ontario, two children belonging to a well known family of Nassagaweya township, near Milton, have died in agony.

Two weeks ago three of the five children became suddenly ill with the disease, which was accompanied by convulsions. Dr. McNiven of Acton was called, but was unable to diagnose the case. Dr. Howitt of Guelph was then sent for, and he, too, was baffled, as were other physicians who have since been called.

The first child, a girl of 15 months, passed away a few days ago, and the second, a three-year-old boy, was buried yesterday. The third child, a boy five years old, is still seriously ill.

Dr. Howitt believes the sickness was caused by a fly carrying a contagious disease, and depositing it on apples which were eaten by the three children. The lining of the bowels of the two children who died came off, and their bodies were reduced to skin and bones.

Dr. Grant Fleming, Deputy Medical Officer of Health for Toronto, stated yesterday he did not think these children were suffering from any unknown disease. The condition of wasting of abdominal tissue, he said, was not unusual in cases of children violently infected through fly-tainted milk or food. He thought their symptoms resembled an acute form of sickness common among children in summer.

TO FANCY

Weaver with the magic loom,
Thou canst never be content
To inhabit a small room,
Or to be in one place pent;
But must traverse constantly
Realms of beauty or of gloom,
Turning out assiduously
Webs of wonder from thy loom.

Bearer of a brimming bowl
Of elixir sweet as life,
Thou canst ever reach Hope's goal,
E'er eschewing patient strife;
No rough ways thy light feet tire,
No stern barrier bid thee stop;
Thine the haunts of heart's desire,
Thine the sky-crowned mountain top.

Piper of a melody
Full of joy, and yet akin
To the sad song of the sea,
When the moaning tide comes in;
O'er Time's vistas thou dost go,
Past and future roaming free,
Pouring through the gates of now
All thy witching melody.

WILSON AND THE WAR

While Lloyd George, Asquith and Winston Churchill are reported as busy on their memoirs the announcement is made that Woodrow Wilson will write nothing about the Great War or the part played in it by the United States. This moves the Louisville Courier-Journal to remark:

"By the student of history in coming times, the loss indicated by this announcement will be keenly felt. Few men, of his own or preceding generations, were so admirably equipped for the writing or the making of history as was Mr. Wilson. His passion for fact, his habit of industry, his comprehensive grasp, the unblurred perspective that was his, and, informing all these, a prose style that unites the finish of Jefferson's First Inaugural with the might have written a history of the Great War that would have ranked as a political and philosophical classic."

This is the view of a fervent eulogist, and will not be shared by many. Mr. Wilson was a shrewd politician, and no man of stronger will ever sat in the White House, but to speak of him as though he were a master of the English language is hardly more ridiculous than to give similar praise to President Harding. Undoubtedly Mr. Wilson thought that he was a magician with words, but what public man in the same period said so many things that had subsequently to be explained away in order to save his popularity? Perhaps the most memorable of Mr. Wilson's phrases in the early part of the war was his "too proud to fight" and bitterly he repented of it. Never did a public man more grossly misinterpret the feelings of his countrymen than Mr. Wilson on this occasion. Whatever faults or virtues the Americans may possess, being too proud was never one of them.

His first public utterance concerning the war was merely silly when he told the American people that they were to remain neutral even at heart. What he asked was a simple impossibility, and we know that Mr. Wilson himself was far from being neutral mentally. On another occasion he declared that the warring nations were fighting for practically the same thing, and that the American people had no interest or concern with the origins of the conflict. Could anything be more opposed to the facts? Mr. Wilson's memorable Fourteen Points tended rather to bedevil the discussions at Paris than to hew out a path whereby a just and lasting peace could be arrived at. No "political and philosophical classic" ever came from Mr. Wilson's pen and none would have come even had he preserved his health. But thanks to the efforts of such panegyrists as Ray Stannard Baker and Joseph Tumulty the world has not been left in the dark as to Mr. Wilson's feelings and actions both in the war and in the conferences that framed the League of Nations. His intentions were good, and had he been functioning in some sort of vacuum, dealing only with abstractions and principles he would not have been open to criticism; he would not have invited defeat. But he was dealing with nimble-witted politicians in Clemenceau and Lloyd George. They were men of practical affairs, who kept their eyes on the immediate present instead of the millennium which fascinated Mr. Wilson. They forced him into compromise after compromise until he had reversed his position on some vital affairs, and then with compliments sent him home to certain political ruin. The plain facts are on record; there is no need for Mr. Wilson to give his interpretation of them.

THE BRITISH DEBT

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has pointed out what he considers inaccuracies in the Balfour note concerning Britain's debt to the United States. It was stated by the Earl of Balfour that the British indebtedness to the United States was incurred in a large measure on behalf of the other Allies. Mr. Mellon says that on the contrary most of the credits were strength of Lincoln's Gettysburg address, the charm of Motley with the philosophic insight of Lecky—with this admitted equipment, Mr. Wilson, had his strength been spared, used for the purchase of material to be used in the British munition factories and for food and other supplies for the British military force. It is equally true, however, that at the time Britain was making these purchases for her own account she was supplying her other Allies with coal, munitions and the use of British ships, without which they could not have carried on. The matter may be summed up in the statement that if Britain had only to finance herself in the war she would not have needed to borrow a dollar from Uncle Sam; and that if her European creditors were to pay what they borrowed she could wipe out the American debt with the proceeds. It is to be admitted, however, that for Britain to wipe out the debt due her is a very different thing from the United States wiping out the British debt. One would be forgiving an insolvent and the other a solvent debtor. Eventually Britain will repay her debt to the United States, if the United States thinks it wise to collect; but there is small prospect of Great Britain receiving any considerable portion of the billions she lent through the war to the Allies. Some of the leading American economists believe that it would be a good stroke for Uncle Sam to remit the debt, and it is not improbable that Britain for purely business reasons may cancel even that part of the debt owed her in Europe that is collectible.

But the moral rather than the economic implications of debt cancellation will interest the average man. While the war was going on and the debt being incurred various American journals and public men suggested that it should be remitted by Uncle Sam. The war then was a terrible reality of which no one could with certainty foresee the end. It has now become a memory, and the game of party politics has become the chief interest with American public men. They might be convinced that it was both economically wise and morally right that the British debt should be wiped out, but they were aware of the fact that the British hating element in the United States would seek to punish at the polls any party that was responsible for such action. The millions of German-Americans would resent it, even though one of its consequences would certainly be to help Germany to her feet. The Irish-Americans would resent it because their hatred and distrust of Britain have not been removed by the granting of Dominion status to Ireland. On the other hand, there is no great block of votes that would be thrown to an administration that cancelled the debt. Politically, therefore, the move would be an unwise one. The Hearst papers would set the heather afire in an effort to rouse the people against this culminating proof of the influence of British gold in American politics. Until the American people become convinced that in their own selfish interests they must help set Europe on her feet, and that to do so it is necessary that there shall be a general policy of debt cancellation, Uncle Sam will remain the creditor of John Bull, and will probably see to it that his payments on account are made promptly.

The German mark is still falling. There is something that is cheap in any event.

CHEERIO

Cheerio! Cheerio! hark the bells chime. And avert is their music as voices keep time. Nought is so bad that it might not be worse. Though I've no money, I still have a purse. My coat is threadbare, my trousers a patch. But pieces put in are quite a good match. What are we groaning for then, you and I? Cheerio! cheerio! Never say die. Cheerio! Cheerio! still the bells chim merrily, merrily, as voices keep time. My old briar pipe has seen its last day. But still I possess a cool smoking clay. A crust of dry bread, a pray'r and a song. Will fill up the gap and help me along. What are we groaning for then, you and I? Cheerio! cheerio! Never say die. Cheerio! cheerio! all the bells chime, And echo makes music as voices keep time. Though I've no place that I can call "home," A shelter I find wherever I roam. When life is over behold my snug bed. Cosily waiting to rest my poor head. What are we groaning for then, you and I? Cheerio! cheerio! Never say die. Mrs. F. E. Kortright.

SAFETY FIRST

"Safety first" is a good maxim in most things, but particularly so in relation to the investment of money. The rich may afford to speculate and to take the risks attendant on high rates of interest. Those whose means are moderate must be careful to see that there is absolute security in their investments. For such people there is no other form of investment which takes such a high rank, combining absolute security with liberal interest, as the bonds of the Dominion of Canada. Holders of Dominion bonds bearing five and a half per cent, maturing December 1, 1922, can re-invest their money at the same rate of interest by exchanging the old bonds for new ones running for either five years or ten years, as the bondholder may prefer. Arrangements for carrying out this exchange can be made through all the chartered banks.

They met and danced, and danced again, and after the eighth or ninth he asked the charmer: "Who is that Gloomy Gus over there? He's been following us around all evening, and sometimes I thought he was gathering the nerve to try to annoy you." "Oh, that?" said the charmer. "Don't bother about him. He's only the fellow that paid my way in."

"The Committee desires to impress upon members that they are to exercise their own choice in the matter—to wear a costume and mask or to come without either." Extract from an invitation to a Country Club Dance. This event was also calculated to appeal to the naked eye.

IS LIFE WORTH WHILE

Is Life worth while? Well I confess There's much that's void of happiness; Full many a friendship buds today Blooms as the rose, but to decay, Leaving one heart that's sad and sore to smile no more.

Is Life worth while? I sometimes fear It's beauty's lost by blinding fear. For though I see the rose decay The love that gave it lives away; Though shedding petals old and sear It blooms each year.

Yes, Life's worth while, for you will find That sadness is a state of mind Which Love can often quickly heal, For Love will sympathy reveal. So, though your heart be sad and sore Just love the more.

Make Life worth while. For if you try To wipe the teardrop from the eye Of some lone being on his knees, Your Ministry of Love will ease The ache that causes him to fear And your heart cheer.

—F. G. Thomas.

Like the heart in your body, the best battery in a car is the one you are least aware of. The battery you want is the one that will give you care-free service for the longest time.

You will not be disappointed if you expect something more than the ordinary service from an Exide. And why be content with a battery that gives only halting service, when a long-life Exide proves a true economy as well as a constant comfort?

In choosing a new car, the kind of battery in it should be one of the things you consider. If it is Exide equipped, you know that so far as one important part of the car is concerned, the manufacturer has provided the best obtainable.

When you have to replace your battery, don't accept a substitute for the Exide—there is no adequate substitute. If you have any trouble in getting an Exide, write us or our nearest district distributor.

OPENING OF PROVINCIAL
CLARESHOLM, OCT. 31st

Efficiency and Progress are paramount in the Clareholm Provincial School of Agriculture's plans for 1922-1923.

Irrigation being emphasized. Excellent dormitory accommodation for girls being provided.

"A little learning makes a man dangerous company for himself" was never more true than it is today. Canada is in its infancy, the young people of today will be the leaders of tomorrow, and as each must be equipped to cope with all the problems of the future. This is especially true of those engaged directly or indirectly in the business of agriculture, presenting as it does problems not only in connection with production, marketing and distribution, but also with regard to our governing bodies and community welfare organizations.

The Clareholm School of Agriculture will reopen for the ninth term on the 31st of October, 1922. It is being equipped as never before, and plans are being made to receive, instruct, and efficiently manage a record attendance. All those in connection with the institution are anxious to assist the students in the acquiring of an all-round development, not only in the practical side of farming and home making, but also in connection with all that goes to form character and efficiency in public life.

Excellent courses have been prepared in Practical and Scientific Agriculture for boys, and in Home Economics for girls. They are free, and cover a period of two years of five months each, except in the case of those students holding matriculation standing who may complete the two years in one, at the end of such time the successful students are presented with diplomas which qualify them to attend the University of Alberta and proceed on a three year's course leading to the B.S.A. degree in the case of men and the B.Ho. in the case of women.

To the regular course, including Animal and Field Husbandry, Farm Management, Poultry, Veterinary Science, Farm Mechanics, Dairying, Horticulture, Botany, Chemistry, Physics, Entomology, English, Mathematics and Civics, Irrigation has been added in the case of the Clareholm School.

The course in Home Economics is open to girls sixteen years of age, or over. In the first year lectures and practical work are given in Foods and Cookery, Sewing and Textiles, Home Nursing, Household Administration, Laundry, Sanitation, Chemistry, English, Horticulture, Mathematics and Poultry. In the second year these courses are continued with the addition of Dietetics, Costume Design, House Decoration, Dairying, Vegetable Gardening and Bacteriology.

Discipline is enforced at all times, attention is given to proper environment for board and rooms, athletics are encouraged, literary, religious and social functions are conducted by the student organizations under the supervision of the staff, a desirable atmosphere is maintained on all occasions.

An attractive home, fully modern, has been obtained for use as a dormitory for the girls, and living expenses will thus be reduced to a minimum. A healthy social life is assured under the supervision of the staff in Home Economics.

Macleod Students Honored

Friday, September 1, will long be remembered by the children who were in attendance at the Macleod public and high schools, as this was the date when the chairman of the school board, with the assistance of the principals and teachers made presentations to the pupils who stood first in their classes during the past year.

The chairman called the assemblage to order and asked the scholars to sing "O Canada," which they did in a way that made the older people look, as they almost made the building shake with the vim they put into their national song. The visitors who were many, and crowded every bit of space, were welcomed by the chairman, and asked to look at the crowd that would, in a short time, be taking our places. The school then sang "Oh God our help in ages past."

The principal of the school asked the chairman to present the prizes for the most proficient pupil in each class during the past year. The prizes were distributed as follows: Grade I, Allison Seymour, while May Hoodless took the prize for her class; Grade II, Ruth Clarke; Grade III, Hazel McNabb; Grade IV, Gladys Cooney. The chairman called the attention of the immense crowd that the girls so far were taking all the prizes, when next called was Allen Gordon for Grade V. Grace Bremner carried off the honors for Grade VI and Verna Armstrong for Grade VII. Derwin Mills, another boy, broke into the line for Grade VIII. Then the high school came in for their share when Louis Wall took Grade IX, and Charles Faulkes took Grade X, and William Watson Grade XI.

A special prize given by one of the teachers, Miss Taber, for good behavior during the year went to May Gibson. The principal's prize for perfect attendance was handed to Lola Campbell, not having missed one day during the year. The school board announced some years ago that they would give a medal for the first, or any following, pupil of Macleod that received all their education from this school, and later graduated from the Alberta University. This honor was given to Enslie Gardiner, he having graduated this year, and now holds a position in one of the universities in California. This was handed to his mother.

The I.O.D.E. then presented the school with a picture of the first celebration held in 1921, which was received by the chair. As each pupil was given a flag they made use of them by flag waving, which made the large room appear a sea of flags and the school rising saluted the flag at the request of the chairman, who then announced that ice cream and cake would be given the children. Singing the National Anthem brought the anniversary to a close.

OVER THE CEDAR GLEN

Over the cedar glen
The westering waves dipped down,
Amid the wood's dim silence
As the night crept on,
And twilight vapors fled
Out from the myrtle sea
In sprays of sweetest odor
From fir and balsam tree.

Nighthawks flitted past
And the crow his cry shrilled loud,
And a thrush in solitude
Sang to the sunset cloud.
And Calypso spread her robe
Mid the dusk of cedar boughs
As day's glittering globe
In a crimson sea sank low.

Then night a mantle out-flung
Studded with stars and gems,
And over the bosky ravine
Glistened her diadem.
Fox-glove and lupin slept,
And daisies drooped their crowns,
And dews in silence wept
As they dripped from gossamer gowns.

And there the cedervale
Lay beneath my feet,
Enwrapped in shadowed silence,
Breathing incense sweet;
Its myrtle pinnacles
In dim cathedral aisles
Guarding an earthly paradise
For many dusky miles.
—Ethel Mary Brodie.

THE EVENING STAR

Majestic star by heaven blest
What is thy magic power?
Of what influence art thou possessor
In this calm evening hour?

Rising after the set of sun
Ere shades of darkness fall,
When the work of day is done
Beautiful over all.

Queen of the West, enthroned sublime,
Entrancing every eye,
Devotion's lamp from clime to clime,
Illumining the sky.

Ah! leadest thou the glorious spheres
In that grand hymn of praise
To the Creator through the years
To everlasting days?

Or is it that thy light is given
Symbol of peace and rest
To turn men's thoughts from earth to heaven
All blessing and all blest?

And it is true that thou hast come
Robed in splendor divine
To guide the wanderer back home
And on the lost to shine.

In mercy so that all may see
There is a place above:
A heavenly home—eternity—
And Father—who is Love?

O star of evening shine this night
As thou hast ne'er before
And be to all mankind a light
While earth's millions adore.
—Frank H. Holmes.

There are few allusions to Moses (or Mesu) in the ancient Egyptian writings, but W. F. Durand, the civil engineer and scientist on his return from Egypt laid before the public some recently discovered evidence in a mummy papyrus that Moses was a poker player. A translation reads: "Mesu, I pray thee, open the pot."

SLIGHTEST OF CLUES CONVICT MURDERERS

"There are few murders where the police have anything but the smallest clues to work on," said Deputy Police Commissioner Faurot, of New York, the other day. He was answering a remark concerning a Lakehurst, N.J. murder in which a Mrs. Ivy Giberson is held by the police as an accomplice in the murder of her husband. Slight indeed, was the clue that caused the police to suspect Mrs. Giberson. She had told apparently a straight story about the murder of her husband by burglars who, she said, had first bound her and then shot him as he slept. Investigation showed that the twine with which she had been bound had been cut from a fresh ball with a pair of scissors. The use of scissors suggested a woman, and the police argued that anyway a gang of burglars about to commit a murder would not hunt

The Broken Button

Mr. Faurot, who was in his time one of the best detectives on the New York force, said that an even smaller clue led a criminal to Sing Sing a short time ago. A man had been knocked down in the street and killed by an automobile, which then sped away. Nobody had got its number, and it seemed an almost impossible task to trace it. From the force of the collision, however, it was inferred that the car would likely show some sign of the accident, could it be located. Detectives scoured the city to find a car with a damaged headlight or fender, and eventually found that a car had been taken to a certain shop where its headlight was fixed. The repairman had naturally noted the number, and so the car was soon traced. On examination it was found that behind the glass in the headlight was half of a little bone button, whose presence had been noted by neither the repair man nor the driver of the automobile. The other half of the button was on the clothes of the man who had been killed. Slight though the clue was, the evidence was absolute.

The Aumuller Murder

Commissioner Faurot then recalled one of the most famous cases in which he was ever engaged, that of the murder of Anna Aumuller by the priest, Hans Schmidt. The dismembered body of an unidentified woman was found in the Hudson River, and upon a pillow case in which one fragment had been wrapped was found the name of the manufacturer, and a number. The manufacturer, when interviewed, said that No. 89 was an odd size, the manufacture of which had been discontinued. The surplus had recently been sold to a furniture dealer, who in turn said that the pillow had been found in possession of her pillow, and the other to a man who could not be found.

Police Turn Burglars

But the police found the apartment to which the pillow had been delivered and watched it, for the tenants were absent. As days passed and nobody turned up, the detectives determined to burglarize the house. They did, and inside found the place in order, with the exception of some ominous stains that had been imperfectly removed. A pillow was missing from the bed. They learned that the occupant of the apartment was Anna Aumuller, a domestic, recently in the employ of a rectory not far away. At the rectory they learned that the woman had been discharged because her personal conduct had been unsatisfactory. They found out also the name of her cousin, to whom they went. He told them that he had not seen Anna for a month, but gave the name of a priest, Hans Schmidt, who had known her for years.

The Waite Murders

It never occurred to them that the priest had had any hand in her murder, but when they next visited him his nervousness was such that their suspicions were instantly roused, and after a short parley they taxed him with the crime, which he admitted. Another trifle that led to the conviction of one of the most infamous criminals of modern time, Dr. Waite, was the murderer's careless rudeness to one of his wife's relatives. Waite had married the only daughter of wealthy parents in Grand Rapids, and became a great favorite with all the family except one cousin. This cousin had seen him dining with a woman not his wife shortly after his marriage and, though he gave a frank explanation which satisfied his wife, the cousin was suspicious. Waite began to poison off his wife's relatives so that he would come into possession of the fortune, and disposed of the mother and her sister without causing comment. Then he poisoned the father, and might even then have escaped suspicion had he not been rude to his father-in-law's cousin when he called to offer condolences. The incident was reported to the suspicious cousin and led her to demand an autopsy, which disclosed that the man had been poisoned. Waite afterward confessed.

HOW PRESIDENT BAER HANDLED COAL INDUSTRY

Prior to 1892, the hard coal industry was in much the same condition as that which prevails in the bituminous fields today. There were too many mines in existence, considering the consumption. It was a common thing for most of them to have long periods in which they operated but one or two days a week, and the plight of the workers was not much better than that of the peasants in Europe in 1892. The attempt was made by President Macleod of the Reading Railroad to stabilize the industry by storing large quantities of coal in one season to relieve the peak load in another season. But this plan led to disaster, because the mine owners having a certain purchaser of their coal in the Reading, piled up huge stores of it, and created a far greater surplus than the country could consume. The result was that the Reading Railway failed under its load of storage coal. It was after the failure that George H. Baer came to the front and became the great autocrat of the Anthracite industry.

Baer Had Foresight

Mr. Baer was a Philadelphia lawyer at the time, and to him the creditors of the Reading entrusted the property in the hope that he might get something out of the wreckage. Mr. Baer was a keen man, and his great success was due to his correct estimate of some future trends of civilization. He noted that cities in the east were becoming congested and foresaw that this condition was likely to increase. It was because of this congestion, with houses jammed against each other and a neighboring chimney perhaps only a few feet away from the windows of the house next door, that many municipalities passed ordinances against the use of bituminous coal for heating purposes. Mr. Baer saw that the time would come when the anthracite dealers would have practically a monopoly of the Eastern market. He was also aware of the fact that the supply of anthracite was comparatively small and in the ownership of few hands.

Building the Monopoly

So he set to work to control the whole industry and had formed even or secret arrangements between the chief coal owners and the railroads that carried coal. The Reading began to earn money and presently Mr. Baer was recognized as the spokesman for the anthracite interests. What he had foreseen began to happen. As the cities grew more and more ordinances were passed against the use of soft coal, and the demand for anthracite increased. He then gave his attention to the matter of the miners. He set his face absolutely against unions, which at that time John Mitchell and William B. Wilson were trying to establish. He perceived that the mine workers were of two classes, skilled and unskilled, and that the skilled men were as a rule more conservative than the unskilled, and therefore not so predisposed toward unions. So his policy was directed to anchoring the skilled men on the job, for he calculated that there would always be sufficient unskilled labor floating about to operate the mines as long as the skilled men remained at work.

A Shrewd Move

His policy in the mines owned or controlled by the Reading was to make the skilled men contractors for the railroad. They were given so much per ton to produce coal at the pit mouth and were supposed to employ their own helpers, that is to say the unskilled men. In these circumstances, naturally, the skilled miners were opposed to a union which might raise wages and cut into their profits, so the wily Mr. Baer had the actual producers of coal divided among themselves. His next move was equally shrewd. Instead of quoting the price of coal at the pit mouth, he began to sell it f.o.b. Philadelphia, New York, Buffalo and other points, the price naturally including the cost of hauling it. Since the same men owned the railroads who owned the coal mines it was the Baer theory that they could divide the money in any way they saw fit.

The Unskilled Men

Having done this he rearranged the wage scale of the contract miners. They were given a sliding scale, a minimum and a bonus. The bonus was not based on the price of the coal at the pit mouth, but on the average price over a month at tide water. That is to say, the contract miner had also an interest in keeping up or increasing freight rates, for the more they were increased the higher was the price of the coal at tide water, and the more his bonus would amount to. The unskilled men were also in many cases interested in keeping up the rates, when their wages depended upon the profits of the contract miners. It seemed impossible for Mitchell and Wilson to organize a union in these circumstances, but eventually they triumphed by getting the unskilled laborers united in the hope that they would reach a parity with the skilled men. When this was accomplished the strike occurred, which resulted in many changes in the coal industry, and incidentally in the suppression of Mr. Baer by the Morgan interests which felt that his method of conducting the strike for the railroads injured the cause of capital and employers everywhere.

In looking over the papers we find that the London Conference is a success, and also that it has failed. We see that President Harding is going to end the railway strike and that he cannot end it. It is also to be observed that we are to have sufficient fuel next year, but in the next column it says we are going to freeze to death. Such is the news of the day.
